(PAF 9172) The course was well thought out and facilitated my learning through difficult topics.
(PAF 9172) Professor Valente is very patient, encouraging and responsive. Her feedback is concise, direct and informative. The change in deadline from Friday's at 500pm to Sunday's at midnight have been a lifesaver for me as a full-time working professional. The course is well-organized and in a logical sequence. Areas of possible improvement: a cheat sheet of STATA scripts could be helpful showing how to run certain recurring analyses; for the main Assignments - in addition to discussion during the lecture video, it could be helpful if there were basic examples (templates) of preferred output that sets the standard of what we need; also, for MIA students it would be nice if a few more international examples were provided. But overall, I learned a lot. Thank you Professor Valente.
(PAF 9172) I really learned a lot. As a student that struggles to understand certain concepts Professor Valente was always available and helpful. She explained everything so well and allowed me to understand and be able to work on the problems on my own. I think that the only comment would be that working in groups can be challenging sometimes and many times working alone works best. Thank you for such a great semester, Professor Valente!!
(PAF 9172) There were one or two of your class videos on youtube the volume was very low, and it was tough to understand.
(PAF 9172) Unfortunately, I can't really grade this course, since it was just a series of online videos. There was little input & interaction from the professor, and, as a result, little enthusiasm for this class. The quality of the videos was also quite poor. It was oftentimes unclear/ difficult for me to hear what the professor is saying in the videos, even though my volume was set to maximum. The good part about this course was that we were allowed to study in groups. The assignments were also interesting and engaging. Overall, however, I don't think the format and the way of teaching were conducive to a proper and interesting studying environment.
(PAF 9172) I really enjoyed this course and felt that the content Professor Valente provided was very interesting.
