(PAF 9270) This was my first time taking a fully online course and I found this format to be very helpful! Being able to watch the lessons and do assignments on my own time worked very well for me. Professor Valente explains everything in the lessons very clearly and the work we do is beneficial to my job position as well. I appreciate being able to learn more about the material we learned in class and would recommend the class and Professor!

(PAF 9270) This class would really be helped by going hybrid. For its subject matter, face-to-face interaction of some kind would have been useful.

(PAF 9270) It was a great class, I learned a lot.

(PAF 9270) The course was extremely well-organized. In fact, I hope it could serve as a model for how asynchronous courses are taught. I was nervous about taking a course with quantitative material (former English major), but I was pleasantly surprised at how well I followed the material. I appreciated the lectures, materials, assignments and pacing of the entire course.

(PAF 9270) This was a great class! Clear and well laid out, and I learned a lot!

(PAF 9270) I think this class is better taught in person, if you are not a data person it can be difficult and at times hard to keep up. Some of the information was hard to understand especially when you had to apply it to the homework prompts.

(PAF 9270) Instruction for assignments can be cleared. It was confusing to upload excel file requirements is one when their is multiple excel worksheets was given to work on. It could be great to submit separately excel work sheet to show the relation of works. Cleared direction on what was expected from the question will be great.

(PAF 9270) The grading was very subjective and harsh. Every student complained about how she graded the material. Other wise the course was great I learned a lot. Her videos were very helpful how ever I did have to do some of my own research on the topic to get a better grasp of things but I recommend taking this course.

(PAF 9270) I would utilize more case studies into the course.

(PAF 9270) The class was perfect for an asynchronous course. The only notes I have are: + The instructions on some parts of assignments were unclear and you would deduct points from it. I'm not complaining about losing points. I'm complaining about losing points on things that were not specified on the assignment. + The use of the textbook felt forced. I am not saying that it was not useful, but it often just repeated what the lectures did in a way that felt like it was an arbitrary addition. The lectures were perfect on their own.

(PAF 9270) Prof. Valente provides a very welcoming and calm environment for students, even through asynchronous learning. She is incredibly organized, which made it easier to complete the assignments on time and successfully. I came in with a lot of research experience, so this introduction course repeated a lot of what I already know, but this was a great refresher, and I think Prof. Valente's lectures were very clear for those with less experience to learn a lot. I would take another course with her in the future if given the opportunity!
